

Why be an Amateur Astronomer?

It may be of no more practical use than a love of music, art or nature's beauty. But understanding the history of our universe, knowing our place in it, and seeing its wonders can be compelling and uplifting.

After all, we are made of "star stuff", and may be the only creatures that can appreciate its own place in the cosmos.

Perhaps if all humanity were amateur astronomers, preserving our incredible planet would be an easier task.

— Al Nagler

Al Nagler with his Bronx Science Telescope